

About me #1:

I consider myself to be a down to earth person, who is friendly and chill. Personally, I'm not really too picky on the kind of roommate I would want to share a place with. For me, someone responsible and easy to get along with would be great. I'd like to think of myself as an extroverted person, who enjoys socializing with friends and meeting new people. Because of my extrovert nature, I would definitely make an effort to get to know my roommate and even their friends if possible. I am lover of music and enjoy karaoke night sessions with my friends at the house, which extends into the company rule. In terms of having people over, as long as my roommate and I notify each other beforehand then it shouldn't be too much of an issue. I spend most of my day at work and at school, so after a long day I like to spend my leisure time relaxing and watching my favorite TV shows.

About me #2:

I am currently a sophomore at Queens College searching for a place closer to the city. Majority of the time I'm either at school or work, and the rest of my time are spent working on my photography. The only time I'm really home is at night or those days when I stay in to edit my photography or cram for a big exam. Because life keeps me so busy, I probably won't have guests over too much. I like to keep my place clean and organized, so maybe my roommate and I could work out some kind of cleaning schedule to keep our place looking fresh. I understand the importance of rules and don't have a problem following any my roommate might have as long as they are reasonable.

About me 3:

I am a student at York College currently in my junior year. With one more year left until I graduate, I've been hitting the books hard and preparing my graduate school applications. Having this busy schedule, I'm not really much of a social butterfly these days. However, if I had a roommate who was more social and wanted to have company over I would be completely fine with it. The most important thing I would need is a quiet place to study. I do most of my studying on the weekends, which I understand are for leisure and social activities. I think it would be most helpful if my roommate and I could devise a schedule where I can maybe have a set number of hours of study time, that way my roommate can enjoy their weekend plans at our place. I am a big believer in respect, so when it comes to rules I think my roommate and I should have a few to make living together a comfortable experience for the both of us.

About me 4:

If I could describe myself in three words I would say flexible, adaptable, and social. I am enrolled in the education program at my college, so most of my mornings are spent at the public school and afternoons are spent at school and work. I'm mostly home at night so if my roommate wishes to have company over or have a social gathering at night I wouldn't have a problem with it. I am quite organized, so I do expect my roommate to help me maintain the place in good order. I am a big fan of working together. When it comes to cleaning, it would be more convenient if my roommate and I could do chores together, or create a little chore chart if individual chores are preferred. To make living together pleasant, healthy communication needs to exist between my roommate and I. I am an open-minded and understanding person, and will always hear my roommate out and be willing to adapt to or change any home rules.
